“The most powerful way to develop potential in others is to let go of ‘your’ way and allow them to develop their own answers and wisdom.”

original perspectives on life and business from leading thinkers, covering topics as diverse as the authors themselves - from personal transformation to human performance, brand relationships, authentic communication, change management, innovative marketing and organic creativity.

The third book of this series is an example of the power of a well-organised thought. Each section follows a structured approach. Every idea is separated into three distinct elements: each concept is presented articulately in a declarative statement, then it is shown contextually in the form of a model or diagram, and finally, the concept is described in detail.
